Building Group Completes New Women's Center and Surgical Expansion at Central Texas Medical Center

The Building Group is pleased to announce completion of the new Women's Center at Central Texas Medical Center (CTMC) in San Marcos, Texas, located just south of Austin. The Building Group's Nashville operation served as Construction Manager at Risk for this project owned by Adventist Health System, a repeat client.

The Women's Center, an addition to the existing medical center, houses a new childbirth center, a Level II neonatal critical care unit (NCCU) and a new cardiac telemetry inpatient nursing unit. Our scope of work included an expansion and renovation of the medical center's surgical suite area — a newly renovated post-anesthesia care unit (PACU) area and six new state of the art operating rooms. We have successfully turned over five of the six new operating rooms. CTMC opened its new Women's Center to patients on November 20, 2009.

The Building Group's Ed Smith, executive vice president and health care market sector leader, noted that our team completed this $35 million expansion project in just 11 months, delivering it one week ahead of schedule! Kody Gildner, project manager, added, "We were able to maintain the tight schedule despite many mid-stream changes. The Texas Department of Health State Inspector said it was one of the best looking projects he has seen in a while, and if all the projects were in this shape there would be no need for him. He said we passed with flying colors."
